“In this selection of my watercolor paintings that span most of the last decade, I explore the conduits, connectors and structures that we move through both figuratively and literally. My lifelong fascination with these distinctly American intersections of access and egress has been influenced by many experiences such as hopping trains and walking bridges as a teenager, spending time in the huge convergent spaces of train yards and witnessing nature’s reclaiming of buildings that cry out to be remembered. The movement of human beings and the invisible connections between everything around us evokes an almost kinetic energy in my work. The passing of buildings from optimal use to obsolescence is also part of my thinking in these paintings as well as how the passage of us all from birth to death connects us to our environment in unseen ways.” Patrick Willett

June 23 - 26, 2014

Workshops will encourage and challenge artists to communicate a story or feeling in their paintings and create strong figurative works of art in watercolor. Referencing a variety of photographs and snap shots her workshops focus on absorbing the viewer by developing emotion and movement; intertwining figurative subjects with their background; seeing natural design in reference materials; exploring the impact of cropping and the placement of contrast; and most importantly a purpose for creating art. Through demonstrations, candid conversation and individual time Jeannie shares her painting style and thoughts as well as the versatility of watercolor when employing a higher ratio of pigment to water.

Watercolor: Aspire to create paintings of people that are worthy of exhibition
Madeline Island School of the Arts
Instructor: Jeannie McGuire
La Pointe, WI
June 2 - 6, 2014

Jeannie McGuire, a Pittsburgh-based watercolor artist, strives to invoke individual interpretation through her artwork, which impressively utilizes a free application of paint and stylistic forms of expression. Narratives are communicated in such works as “Kenneth,” the American Watercolor Society’s 144th Gold Medal of Honor selection. McGuire uses her own photography, acquired snapshots and life drawings to spark her creativity. Her work has been described as a brilliant combination of emotion, movement, and artistry that has been expanded upon from her days as a commercial graphic designer and photographer. Impressionistic in nature with an identifiable subject, her strong, figurative approaches are unique in more ways than one. As is the case, her works have been displayed and awarded on an International level and represented in numerous art magazines.

Approaches to Watercolor with Denise Sperry
Red Barn Arts Center
Wellsboro, Pa.
August 1 - 3, 2014

The watercolor workshop focuses on producing dynamic artwork through the use of flowing abstract underpainting. Learn to use any combination of texture, stamping, drips, gesso, and salt to lay in the foundation. A realistic subject is then superimposed and painted over this background. A new and unique approach to watercolor will be introduced each day.

Denise Sperry is an award winning watercolor artist from Buffalo, NY. She’s a warm and humorous workshop instructor and we’re excited to have her with us for the first time this season. Her work is known for rich vibrant colors, creative depiction of subject and the passion and originality she brings to each piece. Her classes are designed to allow each person to experiment and explore their own personal style without fear of criticism. Denise also has her own line of paints with the Martin F. Weber Co entitled The Denise Sperry landscape set.  www.denisesperry.com

At First Sight: Collecting the American Watercolor reveals the early influences of Alice Walton, the founder of the Crystal Bridges Museum in Bentonville, Arkansas

American watercolorists, including Thomas Hart Benton, John Singer Sargent, Winslow Homer, Andrew Wyeth, and Georgia O’Keeffe.
I can’t imagine waking up on any given day and not being an artist. It’s who I am. Art is my life — it defines me.”

John Singer Sargent's approach to watercolor was unconventional. Going beyond turn-of-the-century standards for carefully delineated and composed landscapes filled with transparent washes, his confidently bold, dense strokes and loosely defined forms startled critics and fellow practitioners alike. One reviewer of an exhibition in London proclaimed him "an eagle in a dove-cote"; another called his work "swagger" watercolors. For Sargent, however, the watercolors were not so much about swagger as about a renewed and liberated approach to painting. In watercolor, his vision became more personal and his works more interconnected, as he considered the way one image—often of a friend or favorite place—enhanced another. Sargent held only two major watercolor exhibitions in the United States during his lifetime. The contents of the first, in 1909, were purchased in their entirety by the Brooklyn Museum of Art. The paintings exhibited in the other, in 1912, were scooped up by the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. John Singer Sargent Watercolors reunites nearly 100 works from these collections for the first time, arranging them by themes and subjects: sunlight on stone, figures reclining on grass, patterns of light and shadow. Enhanced by biographical and technical essays, and lavishly illustrated with 175 color reproductions, this publication introduces readers to the full sweep of Sargent's accomplishments in this medium, in works that delight the eye as well as challenge our understanding of this prodigiously gifted artist.

The international art star of the Gilded Age, John Singer Sargent (1856-1925) was born in Italy to American parents, trained in Paris and worked on both sides of the Atlantic. Sargent is best known for his dramatic and stylish portraits, but he was equally active as a landscapist, muralist, and watercolor painter. His dynamic and boldly conceived watercolors, created during travels to Tuscan gardens, Alpine retreats, Venetian canals and Bedouin encampments, record unusual motifs that caught his incisive eye.

Shenzhen International Watercolor Biennial

Shenzhen International Watercolor Biennial Exhibition, China is a non-profit-making academic exhibition. We advocate a diversified development of watercolor; encourage an up-to-date trial, and the exploration and innovation of watercolor. It is also a platform for watercolor work exchange between China and the world. We hope that this International Watercolor Biennial can promote the communication between artists from different countries, and push the art of watercolor forward. Linked with watercolor, the biennial is an international gala of culture and art. Let it be a window for China to know the world and the world to know China.
